ORGANIZED ONE DAY EDUCATIONAL TOUR OF STUDENTS TO ARVI ON

23/01/2024

As a part of educational tour we had organized one day tour to Arvi village of Shirur kasar. For this tour 21 students of our department were present enthusiastically. In this study tour we also showed students solar farm and explained about them. Our faculty members were present on this tour.

Zoology Study Tour (2023-24)

Kalikadevi Arts Commerce and Science College, Shirur kasar organized one-day study tour for its zoology students to explore the fascinating world of poultry farming and cow shelters. The tour aimed to provide students information about management practices associated with these two crucial aspects of animal husbandry. On 23 January 2024 we visited the poultry farm and cow shelter at Arvi, near Shirur Kasar. Upon arrival, students were greeted by the farm's caretaker, who guided them through each stage of the poultry production process. The tour began in the hatchery, where students explained about process of incubation and hatching. The fertilized eggs incubated and hatched into chickens for meat production. Students learned about the significance of proper temperature, nutrition, and hygiene in ensuring the well-being and growth of these chickens. The farm's manager discussed various parameters of poultry farming such as production, disease, vaccination and management. He explained to students that poultry farming has vast potential for employment. After poultry farm second visit was to the cow shelter. This provide sheltering to old, abandoned and infertile cattles. The objective was to assess the health status of these animals, with a particular focus on identifying endoparasitic and ectoparasitic infections. Upon our arrival at the cow shelter, caretakers who provided valuable information about the management and care of abandoned cattles. The initial phase of our study involved physical parameters such as body condition, coat quality, and behavior were observed. It was observed that a significant number of these animals shows signs of malnutrition, dehydration, and general neglect. fecal samples were collected from few animals for parasitological analysis. Ectoparasitic infections were observed on several animals. External parasites, particularly ticks. The infestation of ticks not only contributed to skin irritation but also posed the risk of transmitting various diseases. This endo- and ectoparasitic infections raised critical concerns about the overall health and well-being of the abandoned cattle.

Industrial Visit

An educational and industrial tour was organized by the Commerce Department on 30th January 2024, in which the Samruddhi Dal Mill in Shirur was visited.
